

Jeff DeSantis

Singer/Songwriter

Jeff DeSantis (jĕf dĭ SĀN' tĭs): n. Smalltown Singer/Songwriter currently engaged in conflict with the world of unemotional, shrink-wrapped corporate music. Out to remind people that 22 year old bubblegum-chewing divas probably don't know as much about joy and heartbreak as they purport to.

So far, they're winning the battle. Come join the fight.

Jeff DeSantis has spent plenty of time being a session musician for other folks, and is now performing solo as well as being the guitarist and primary songwriter for One Big Dakota. His songs are simultaneously moving and entertaining, as audiences all over the Pittsburgh area have been discovering. His music is Alt-Country, it's Americana, it's Rock, and it's a blend of all the music that Jeff has ever loved. He has performed on stages such as the Penn Brewery, Café Kolache in Beaver, Pittsburgh Deli Company, and the Three Rivers Arts Festival and shared those stages with The Distractions, The Granati Brothers, and Donnie Iris, just to name a few. He penned all the songs and played guitar for One Big Dakota's debut CD "Me, I'm Fine." His 14 song solo album, "323 13th Street," was released in October 2005 and is available at CD Baby and as a download on iTunes.
